

Sustainability at a Regional Campus

Transition-ECU SW - Action Research for Sustainability

Transition ECU - South West is a multi-faceted action research project that began with a desire to support staff to reorient their teaching toward sustainability.

- Members of the seven program groups within the faculty engaged in focus groups, an art project and paper writing. These have become focal points for the development of a cross-disciplinary dialogue.
- Our Student Sustainability Group developed a project to recycle materials that could be used in visual arts. This group also worked with education students designing a student community garden for the campus.
- Education students are very involved with the development of the Transition Bunbury website, and are conducting sustainability projects in the community
- Transition Bunbury is a growing collaboration between local organisations and individuals concerned about our environment. This group holds seminars on campus for the public.

We are now developing an integrated model that can be used as a guide for others.
